Trends in the EdNext Survey: Question wording and data over time

With the release of its 2018 poll, EdNext celebrates the twelfth anniversary of its annual survey of American public opinion on K-12 education policy. An interactive graphic available here presents trends in opinion on key issues over time among the general public, Republicans, Democrats, and teachers. Some of the wording in the questions presented in the graphic varied slightly from year to year; this document lists the variations and data.

GRADING SCHOOLS

Questions: Local

Local (2011, 2015-2018): Students are often given the grades A, B, C, D, and Fail to denote the quality of their work. Suppose the public schools themselves were graded in the same way. What grade would you give the public schools in your community?

Local (2012-2014): How about the public schools in your community? What grade would you give them?

Local (2008): Students are often given the grades A, B, C, D, and Fail to denote the quality of their work. Suppose the public schools themselves, in this community, were graded in the same way. What grade would you give the public schools here?
